MR. EDWARD CLODD in the DAILY CHRONICLE.—"If a man die, shall he live again?" is a question asked chilicads before Job put it, and the generations of mankind repeat it. In this profoundly interesting volume, Professor Frazer, out of the treasury of his knowledge, and with consummate art of attractive presentation, gives the answers devised by the Lower Races."

ATHENSEUM.—^{£1}11 these writings in many languages Mr. Frazer has read and digested with extraordinary care, so that his book will be for years the book of reference on such matters, not only in England, but in France and Germany. It is a perfect thesaurus of Greek topography, archaeology, and art."

MR. C. NIENT SHORTER in the DAILY CHRONICLE.—"To the task Dr. Frazer has given a scholarly care that will make the edition one that is a joy to possess. His introductory Memoir, of some eighty pages in length, is a valuable addition to the many appraisements of Cowper that these later years have seen. It is no mere perfunctory 'introduction' but a piece of sound biographical work. Dr. Frzer has given us two volumes that are an unqualified joy."
